Well, not really. In March 2006, CNN flew Erin Weed to Daytona Beach as a safety expert for a special report on Spring Break in America. She had the chance to get an in-depth look at what's happening on spring break today and the danger behind seemingly innocent situations. Erin also had the opportunity to reflect on her own college spring break in South Padre, TX with 40 of her friends.

She recalled the many instances of binge drinking, unsafe sex and legal situations which were experienced during just one wild week, and developed practical solutions to avoid these bad situations. Now she and her team of talented speakers are taking these proactive strategies on the road for the 2010 Spring Break Tour, in hopes that college students will realize their personal safety on spring break is 100% up to them. Using our signature style of combining humor with straight talk, we urge students to have a blast on spring break...but to make safe choices in the process.

I know our sorority women weren't really looking forward to this presentation because they thought it would be another boring speaker.

They get tired of speakers who are dry or preachy.

They all went back to their rooms and practiced their 3 steps of self-defense. More than anything else, she got them THINKING about how they can take better care of themselves, on Spring Break and any other time.

- Dana @ Presbyterian College
